End of 1st Wilderness period

At the end of a "space (of)...thirty and eight years" from the 2nd year after the Exodus [Numbers 10:11,12; 13:2,3; 14:2,28f.], the Israelites "went over the brook Zered...(at the border of Canaan)" (Deuteronomy 2:14).

The "about...forty years" of Acts 13:18

The approximation of "about...forty years" is separate from the stated precise period of "forty years" before the land could be entered (Numbers 14:34). And since particular mention is made of "the men of war (who) were consumed" after 38 years, that is, 2 years short of the 40 years before the land could be entered (Numbers 14:29-34; Deuteronomy 2:7,14-16), then the figure in Acts 13:18 of "about...forty years" must apply to the 38 year period when "Yahweh...suffered...their manners in the wilderness" (Acts 13:17a,18; cf. Numbers 14:35).

End of 2nd Wilderness period

At the end of the precisely stated "forty years" before the land could be entered (Numbers 14:34), the Israelites "pitched by Jordan...in the plains of Moab", that is, prior to their entry into Canaan (Numbers 33:48f), on the 1st day of the 11th month (Shebat) "in the fortieth year....began Moses to declare (God's) law" (Deuteronomy 1:3,5).

5 further years until "they divided the land" (as per Joshua 14:5).

Joshua succeeded Moses (Deuteronomy 34:9; Joshua 1:2) and "became (Israel's) commander after (Moses)....for twenty-five years" (Josephus: Antiquities V,i,29).
